Advanced.Steel.v8.1...Chronic restraint stress sensitises the subventricular zone neural stem cell pool but not the dentate gyrus. Stressful events, such as chronic restraint, are thought to alter hippocampal neurogenesis and could contribute to psychiatric symptoms associated with depression. To delineate the specific nature of these effects, we investigated the effects of chronic restraint stress on neurogenesis in the subventricular zone (SVZ) and dentate gyrus (DG) of adult male and female C57BL/6 mice. The mice were divided into three groups. The control group did not receive any treatments; in the stressed group, the mice were subjected to a 12-week chronic restraint stress; and in the 2-h group, the mice were restrained for 2h. Changes in SVZ neurogenesis were examined by (1) quantification of the number of stem cells that had migrated into the olfactory bulb; (2) analyses of doublecortin (DCX)-positive cell number, a marker of dividing precursors and immature neurons; and (3) the analysis of doublecortin (DCX)-positive cell migration into the olfactory bulb. Changes in DG neurogenesis were investigated by quantification of DCX-positive cells, including newly generated immature neurons. In the SVZ, the number of migrating stem cells decreased in the stress group and 2-h group, but it did not change in the control group. In the DG, the number of DCX-positive cells in the stressed group significantly increased compared with controls. Our results suggest that adult neurogenesis in the SVZ and DG is affected differently in response to stress. The decrease in SVZ neurogen
